Building our own future in film

The interlinking initiatives and projects created by the BFA are designed to work as a movement to allow filmmakers and actors with an extraordinary talent the chance to create their own opportunities, find a pathway through the many obstacles which they currently face and bring their work and careers into fruition.

Co-written by former Royal Engineer Matthew Weston. 'Thin, Brittle, Mile' the Joining Forces Campaign's first planned feature, tells the story of a young soldier whose greatest battles are fought on his return home.

NEXT STEPS

The documentary 'Fires we're Starting...' will follow our endeavours to bring our various initiatives to the industry's attention and demonstrate a sustainable model which could be pivotal in allowing extraordinary talent to come to light.

We aim to prove that filmmakers themselves can find the solutions to the main problems we currently face; lack of opportunity, exploitation, marketing, funding and distribution.

Most importantly we hope to show that passionately driven filmmakers and actors who are committed enough, can break through any barrier to reach an audience and find a way to tell the stories which speak of our times.
